Leading Italian Parties Are Urged to Cooperate

UNITED ACTION ADVOCATED ON

Liberals and Radicals Ought to Work Together Along Progressive Lines Says a Member

SOME TAXES RAISED

(Special to the Monitor) FLORENCE, Italy-The Hon, Sacchi, a member of the present government, declared not long since that Liberals and Radicals ought to work together. The of the United States to insure some be borne in mind: informing idea of this declaration was a sound one; what loyalty to progress people, is manifested in different groups should be manifested in a loyalty more practically evident in their united action on great questions.

There is no doubt that in Italy as in other countries the forces of liberalism, in the broad sense of the word, cannot afford to split up into the weakness of party striving and party ambition. It is equally true that the forces of medievalism and harmful reaction wish nothing better than such a dissipation of energy on the part of men who have the firm establishing of Italian liberty of thought and action in their hands.

But notwithstanding that certain members of other liberal groups object that such united action might result in the loss of individuality in one or more of the progressive parliamentary groups, it is a good sign that such united action is hinted at in the speech of a member of government. Another part of practical, namely, that anti-clericalism a constitution but no constitutionalism. as such was to be avoided.

the state. Anti-clericalism, as such and which they are now steeped. such only, would provide the enemies of real liberty with the argument that was a denial of the principles of true liberalism, and it would give an opportunity, moreover, to raise the cry of persecution.

It is a practical question, whether to make too much of a priest using his functions to threaten his parishioners from the pulpit were they to vote as the church did not wish, would not make such capital as in the end would permit more political interference than park, with a paper by R. W. Livingstone at present obtains. "The state above all" and "justice to all," are words that

There was a want of applied intelligence and system in reading. Literature was the most difficult of subjects to teach because it was so hard to hitch on to a boy's interests and to connect with the world in which he lived. The boys missed almost entirely that revelation of the human heart which was the core of literature. They were not interested in it. It was much easier to teach history than literature. A great teacher, like a great actor, could take them into the heart of literature and thrill them with emotions they had never experienced. But they could not create great teachers, and it was more profitable to turn to the second cause of failure. This was a want of technique of system. Of course it was possible to lounge and drift through a book and derive pleasure and profit from it and this was how most people read. But it was lounging, not reading. To study literature with profit there were things one had to learn. Boys who read descriptive or dramatic writing should be taught to visualize what they read, and while this was not possible in all writing it was indispensable in reading drama, descriptive and narrative writing, most history, and nearly all

AUSTRALIANS ENTHUSE OVER

Proposition to Spend £88,000,-000 in Twenty Years on Ships, pears to Meet Wide Approval

(From a Monitor special correspondent) LONDON -- Australians believe that what a native can do, a white man can do better. The white shearer will shear over his 100 sheep with hand machines, and anything over 200 with power driver shears. His pay is high, but he is no slouch, and he earns it. It is from these beginnings, that has sprung the policy of "White Australia."

Australians want white men to earn a white man's wage and possess the decencies and comforts of life. These aspirations were gathering strength just at the time when the government of England decided to make its Japanese alliance. Japan won its war with Russia. The strength of the royal navy was withdrawn from the Pacific Onickly then spread a feeling that some day Australia might have to fight for her

The feeling was not one created by be voiced by the "bush" poets in the Sydney Bulletin and the country newspapers. Their voices may not have been well tuned, but they meant what they said, and the workers knew it for their

In 20 years the total expenditure will be £88,000,000 sterling, of which half will be on ships and docks, and the rest on maintenance.

Fleet Is Started

The fleet at present consists of one battle cruiser, three light cruisers, three destroyers and submarines and other destroyers building. Twenty years hence 10 light cruisers, 18 destroyers, 12 sub marines, and other ships. And there will be 14 naval stations or sub-stations. A naval college is giving free education for naval cadets, and a training ship to boys who will be seamen.

In the enlistment of young Austral ians as seamen the supply already exceeds the demand. At present most of the officers and men are borrowed from the royal navy, but less will be required every year as soon as the local training institutions commence to produce trained

The military training scheme of Australia may be briefly explained. All boys from 12 to 14 years are trained in the schools, education up to 14 being generally compulsory. Although called junior cadets, these lads are given only physical training and marching compul sorily, with a few optional subjects, such as swimming, miniature shooting and first aid in addition.

At 14 years boys come on the regis ter of the military areas in which they live. They are allotted to units (some to the naval cadets) and given uniform and arms. From 14 to 18 they train as senior cadets in 93 battalions, each year four whole days, 12 half days and 24 night drills. Their work is physical training continued, drill, tactical work of a company and shooting on open ranges up to 500 yards.

At 18 years they pass into the militia, which still retains the officers, N. C. O.'s., and many men from the old organization. At present about 18,000 per annum are coming in, and larger numbers later on. In the militia they are aland must train these for seven years, at people upon whom the tax was to be pile. the rate of 16 whole days per annum, put were those who did not put their of which not less than eight must be in camps of training. In speaking to the measure the commissioner stated that the history of roads in South Australia was one concerning which no shame need be felt. It was not so long ago that the roads of the state were invariably commented on very favorably by visitors, and even now they could bear favorable comparison

A critical period had, however, arrived, and a considerable amount of money would be required to be spent on the roads owing to the fact that increased production had resulted in such a big volume of traffic.

The commissioner then explained that the annual subsidy granted by the gov ernment to local governing bodies for the upkeep of main roads had, as regards ficient. Proceeding, he said they could not afford to allow the chief avenues from Adelaide into the country to fall into a state of disrepair.

A similar publicity service is maintained by the other large institutions. Harvard, which is considered one of the more conservative of the American universities, has recently established a publicity committee and has placed the work of assisting the newspapers and magazines in their quest for Harvard news in charge of Roger Pierce, the secretary of the Harvard Alumni Association. Journalists and reporters who would be able to secure their desired material only after a long search through the many departments of the university are now able to turn to Secretary Pierce for accurate and adequate news, whether it relates to the work of the Bussy Institute, the Lawrence Scientific school or to any other branch of the university's activities.

For several years Yale has had a large and well systematized organization for carrying on its publicity work. Columbia has trained writers at its disposal to prepare news articles on the work of its students and professors, while the other leading colleges are equally well equipped to meet the demands of public interest.

This board meets regularly, censors all the news that has been collected by the student reporters, and shares in the preparation of articles of general interest. Smith College has its press bureau, while Radcliffe is taken care of by the Harvard publicity committee.

This Mark Means Juicy, Sweet Fruit

Oranges and grapefruit are good because of the juice—the pulp has little food value. When you eat an orange or grapefruit, how good it is depends upon the amount of juice it contains.

And when you buy these citrus fruits, whether or not you get your money's worth also depends upon how juicy they are.

Only Tree-Ripened Oranges and Grapefruit Are Fully Filled With Juice, Sweet and Spicy

Oranges and grapefruit must have been tree-ripened to give them the full amount of juice; to which the buyer is entitled. The juice increases in quantity each day while the fruit is ripening on the trees—and becomes sweeter as the citric acid turns to sugar.

Juicy oranges can be grown only under favorable soil and climate conditions, of course, such as are found so generally throughout Florida. The grapefruit grown in Florida has a world-wide reputation for surpassing quality and delicious flavor.

Florida Citrus Exchange Oranges and Grapefruit Are Ripened on the Trees

Only tree-ripened, juicy fruit is put into the market by the growers who form the Florida Citrus Exchange—because they believe in advancing their own interests by protecting the interests of consumers of their fruit.

This spicy, sweet and delicious fruit has splendid keeping qualities. It is carefully handled by white-gloved workers, and no hand touches it in grove or packing house. No child labor is employed by the exchange.

Up-to-date dealers in almost every city sell Florida Citrus Exchange Oranges and Grapefruit: If your grocer doesn't carry them, he will get a supply if you insist. Should you have any difficulty finding the fruit, please write to

BLOUSE WITH RAGLAN SLEEVES

Full vest that can be made from net

The blouse made with raglan sleeves that extend to the neck is a new one, extremely smart and very pretty for the fashionable soft materials. 'This one includes a full vest that can be made from net or any similar material which gives a very dainty effect. The frill at the neck is a feature also. The long sleeves are somewhat unusual, being slashed and plaited to give a cuff effect; those of three quarter length are simply finished with attached cuffs.

In the picture, brocaded charmeuse is made with a lace vest and frill. Plain silk would be pretty with shadow net used for the trimming portions. Marquisette or chiffon is effective used in combination with either crepe or setin.

For the medium size, the blouse will require 3% yards of material 27, 2% yards 36, 21/s yards 44 inches wide, with one yard 27 inches wide for the west

The pattern (8085) is cut in sizes from 34 to 40 inch bust measure. It can be bought at any May Manton agency, or will be sent by mail. Address, 102 West Thirty-second street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

might like another. Furthermore, he said, if those favoring annexation were defeated they might like to have some voice in the kind of charter to be given.

Roscoe Walsworth, counsel for a committee appointed at a Revere town meeting to prepare a charter for submission to the voters, said that at the meeting citizens of Revere as a whole wanted a change in local government.

With about 1400 voters present at the annexation, about 100 in favor of a commission form of city government, about 100 for a city charter with the usual form of government and the rest voted for numerous other plans.

Before adjournment it was voted to appoint the committee which he represented. About the only opposition of submitting the plan of these two propositions to the voters came from some citizens who were opposed to any change which would allow licensed saloons in

Mr. Casassa said he understood that both the annexation and the city charter is voted down, then the annexationists buildings instead of one do not want the city charter in the form given in the bill. The Annexation League, OPPORTUNITIES he said, should have the right to change that charter. Pilgrim Zolla, secretary of the Revere

Annexation League, said it had a membership of 600 registered voters of Revere and is a representative committee of the inhabitants of Revere. While Appointment Bureau of Educathey might not agree on the form of city charter, the annexationists do not care what form of charter the committee may give them so long as the charter may be submitted along with the ques

· As both the Democratic and Progressive leaders are backing the movement to have state-issued political circulars the project is expected to find more favor at the session this year than it has heretofore. A number of bills relating to the subject have been filed, so today's discussion is only the beginning of a consideration which will probably result in the selection of a bill on which all the parties can agree.

The Senate is to take up again this afternoon the bill for an appropriation of $25,000 for the directors of the port of Boston, at which time it is expected to be settled whether the appropriation is additional to or the first instalment of the $75,000 in appropriations for this purpose voted by the last Legislature.

They operate the same way, however, to REPORT TO BE MADE

CHICAGO - The Chicago municipal markets commission, after an investigation lasting for several months, has reached the conclusion that the establishment and successful operation of retail municipal markets or cooperative stores must be preceded by the establishment of municipal wholesale terminal markets with several branches.

This conclusion, which will direct the future investigations and reports of the commission, was made stronger by the admission of one of the large commission men of the city, speaking as a representative of South Water street. A large part of the produce and fruit that comes to Chicago is handled through South Water street, the business approximating $250,000,000 a year. This dealer told the commission that the business conditions of South Water street are wasteful, uneconomic and unsanitary.

The commission was appointed by Mayor Carter Harrison "to make a comprehensive study and report on the subject of municipal markets and other agencies tending to bring the producer and the consumer into closer contact." The members are Alderman James H. Lawley, chairman; Alderman Jacob A. Freund, Alderman John Tolman (these three representing respectively the West, North and South divisions of the 'city): Mrs. C. Franklin Leavitt, Miss Amelia Sears, Miss Gertrude V. Soule of the University of Chicago settlement, Fred A. Curtis of the City Club, J. J. ## EXPLORER TELLS OF HIS STUDY OF OLD QUIRIGUA

Sylvanus Morley Says Old Center of Maya Civilization in Guatemala Was Probably Abandoned Early in Sixth Century

WASHINGTON - Sylvanus Griswold Morley, in a communication to the National Geographic Society at Washington, says that Quirigua, in the republic of Guatemala, Central America, was one of the older centers of the great Maya civilization, which flourished in southern Mexico, Guatemala, and northern Honduras during the first 15 centuries of the Christian era. "Judging from the dated monuments which were erected in its several courts and plazas, this ancient American metropolis was abandoned during the first half of the sixth century A. D.," writes the explorer. "Towards the close of the sixth century the Mayas moved out from the older centers of their civilization in the south and migrated northward into Yucatan. Here in the stress of colonizing a new and unfamiliar land the remembrance of their former homes gradually faded, until Quirigua, along with many another southern city, be came only a memory, a tradition. Finally, long before the discovery of America, even the tradition of its former existence had passed from the minds of men."

But for the enterprise of a wellknown corporation interested in fruit cultivation, the ruins might have remained uncovered for centuries more. The company purchased a large tract of land in this vicinity for a banana plantation, and through an arrangement with the School of American Archeology the systematic study of the ruins was unelapsed since its abandonment a dense in Baltimore. The New Orleans public tropical vegetation had overgrown the city, overthrowing its temples and paltablished when the city was settled. The aces and reducing them to shapeless

> "The jungle had won its way into the different courts and plazas; and these public squares, once teeming with the life of a populous community, had become the haunt of the tiger, peccary, monkey, ant-eater and the infinite host of the tropical forest. The jungle had again reclaimed its own. As the work of excavation proceeded there gradually developed from this mound of earth and fallen stone the ground plan of what had originally been an imposing temple,

PRACTICAL WAY ADVOCATED FOR VOCATION STUDY

Vocational training based on the actual demand as seen by the employer and employee, with the organization of means to ends undertaken by industry and comwas urged by Prof. Paul H. Hanus of the department of education, Harvard University, at an assembly in the Harvard Club last night.

He said that most of the vocational courses in the high schools have had nothing to do with commerce. Bookkeeping, typewriting, shorthand and commercial arithmetic constitute the training of a clerk, but the office force of an enterprise, he said, forms only a relatively small part of it.

The speaker pointed out that while there was a great deal of talk about vocational training and while many agencies existed for supplying it, the work ual demand. He said he was not disparaging the training of a clerk, but

PENN SHOWING GOOD

NEW YORK-Followers of the Intercollegiate Swimming and Water Polo League are just now looking forward to the completion of the midvear examination period at the various colleges at which time the championship events will be taken up again where they were left off about a week ago. Every team in the league his competed in at least one intercollegiate match and it is possible to get a fairly good line on the men most likely to win the individual championship titles when they take place in March. College of the City of New York is the only member of the league which has completed its schedule in both swimming and water polo. In swimming she lost three meets, one each to Princeton, Yale, and Penn sylvania, while she succeeded in defeating Columbia. In water polo, however, she lost every meet, being defeated by every stitution, winning both. Yale has also agreement. defeated C. C. N. Y. twice. Crimson Players Defeat Heights Casino Six Games to One and Finish With Clean Slate

NEW YORK-Members of the Harvard Club are today congratulating their squash tennis team over its regaining the championship of the interclub league Thursday by defeating the Heights Casino players 6 matches to 1. This victory gave the Harvard Club a clean slate in the league standing with five victories and no defeats.

The Harvard Club was represented by its strongest team, and scored an easy nev between the Columbia and Princeton won by 4 games to 1.

A. J. Cordier, the handicap champion, was the only player on the Brooklyn team to win for his club. He defeated F. H. Davis in straight sets after a hardfought match. Cordier played all around the Harvard player in the first set, but in the second Davis made a strong rally and forced his opponent to 18-16 for a victory. George Whitney, the champion, lost one set to C. M. Bull, Jr., the ranking tennis player.

Dr. A. Stillman, 2d, the former national champion, was extended to the limit to win from J. L. Lowe. The Brooklyn player captured the first set, but the effort appeared too much for him, and ston of the Harvard Club and George Abbott of the Heights Casino.

Mayor Eliot, as can easily be understood, was a real force in the musical progress of Boston. That was the day of Lowell Mason and George J. Webb, who did so much for music in the schools. Indeed they were the first to secure entrance for music into the public schools of Boston, a thing accomplished in the year 1838, when Mr. Eliot was mayor. Mr. Eliot was also member of Congress and was treasurer of Harvard College when that institution was administered by the same group or class of men who watched over the civic interests of Boston. He published a volume of "Observations on the study of the Bible for the use of Young Persons," and various poetical translations.

Colonel Goethals Perfects His Work

New York city is not to have Colonel Goethals as police commissioner. At least, not in the near future. When nation and metropolis are rivals for a man's loyal service the winner is usually the larger unit of government; and especially is this likely to be the case when the nation proposes consummation of a career already renowned and the city offers a task new, complex and uncertain in its outcome. If there ever was a time when the President hesitated about naming Colonel Goethals as governor of the Panama Canal Zone it must have preceded the study of the problem at first hand made by the secretary of war. Since that official's report there has been little question as to where his influence would count. Making due allowance for the commendable aid given by the civilian commissioners in bringing the canal to completion, Secretary Garrison, like other students of present and future national responsibilities in the zone region, contended that wisdom dictated concentration of authority in the hands of a man conversant with military as well as engineering affairs and of proved administrative ability. In this case what more natural than retention of Colonel Goethals?

By accepting the new post, Colonel Goethals will sacrifice in a pecuniary way more than the nation should expect of a public servant. For many reasons residence in New York would have pleased him and his family, and a grapple with the forces of lawlessness while administering the police department would have tested anew his capacities as a man. But he has the West Point training back of him, with its emphasis on duty and its relative indifference to money considerations. Consequently he will make history in and about the Canal Zone at a stage of national evolution when the importance of having first grade servants in that region of the world can scarcely be overstated.

If, as seems likely now, the United States as a government enters soon upon construction and management of public works in Alaska, there will be a fine chance to recruit men whose professional and moral capacity has been proved by their records in Panama. Colonel Goethals, as an adviser of Washington officials, can render much valuable aid in this project, while proceeding with his duties as zone governor in the tropics.

True to Higher Loyalties REPORTS are at hand of renewal in tradesunion circles of advocacy of unionization of all federal employees. Thus, in the United States, looms on the horizon an issue as fundamental to democracy's perpetuity as any that can be named, and an issue that European statesmen have had to deal with drastically, backed by public opinion that refuses to let servants of the state become its rulers. Like many another matter, it is best dealt with in its earliest stages. So it is to be hoped that the President and Congress will be vigilant. Legislation that recognizes class distinctions, that exempts special groups of citizens from authority of certain laws, can hardly fail to give encouragement to public officials organized to procure for themselves special privileges and larger incomes. Such federal employees already have a status more secure than that of the worker in private industries. If they err we imagine it is in coveting so much security and power that inevitably society at large will revolt against a bureaucratic tyranny.

Reduced to its lowest terms this issue is one of comparative loyalties. Self-interest and class interest clash with state welfare and social needs, and many there be today whose most constant regard is for class and not for the state, for the special group and not for the social whole. This more restricted loyalty, while intense and often sincere, cannot endure when met with the aroused loyalty of persons who put nation above group. If a crisis comes and a choice must be made, many a radical becomes conservative, and many a proletarian becomes a patriot. Witness M. Briand.

President Wilson in some of his recent writings, appears to be committed to opposition to any effort to mass federal employees together as shapers of legislation or administrative rules in their own interests.

Government in Pipe Line Ownership

MUCH matter has recently appeared in the newspapers tending to emphasize the importance with which the various nations, and especially those having powerful navies, regard petroleum discovery and production and the possibility of sharing in the supply. The reason, of course, is now obvious to all readers. Oil as a power-producing fuel is rapidly taking the place of coal at sea.

The demand for petroleum fuel has increased tremendously of late; all the indications point to even a much greater increase in the future. Wherever possible, governments are striving to obtain possession of oil fields. Exploration and prospecting with this end in view is being carried on almost from the Arctic to the Antarctic regions. Every continent is being searched; concessions are being sought in all.

Only in recent years has the United States undertaken to reserve and conserve any considerable portion of its oil land area for public purposes. It is now earnestly engaged in an effort to increase its holdings, as it is determined to hold fast to all it has. Moreover, its purpose is to bring the petroleum-producing area available within easier access of the sea. Under legislation that bids fair shortly to become law, funds are sought which will enable the Washington government to construct a pipe line connecting the oil fields of Oklahoma with the gulf of Mexico.

But there is more involved in a decision of the United States government to pipe its navy oil fuel from Oklahoma than appears on the surface. A $10,000,000 undertaking of any kind is interesting, but at most it could be regarded in this case only as an incident to the disbursement of a billion-dollar allowance. The point of greatest importance is that if the government is to go into the transportation of oil can it do so without first nationalizing the oil fields from which it intends to draw its supply? For it would seemingly need to secure itself against any adverse combination of those who might own the oil. This would be a step much farther advanced toward public ownership and operation than any the United States has thus far taken within its generally recognized political and geographical boundaries. What it may do in Alaska is another matter.

The whole subject, as our readers have been informed, is to be inquired into carefully. It would, as everybody realizes, be only a short step from the nationalization of oil fields to the nationalization of coal fields, from the government carriage of oil to the government carriage of coal and other commodities. The investigation promised under the Gore resolution is likely to open up what will prove to be the most important questions in economics the United States people, as a people, have ever been called upon to solve.

The metric system continues to spread among all save the English-speaking nations. In the last four years its compulsory use has been adopted, so it is reported, in Denmark, China, Japan, the five republics of Central America, Bulgaria, Chile, Uruguay and Siam. Although advocates of the system have been tireless in Great Britain and the United States, little headway has been made against the foot rule and yardstick, the pound and stone, the pint and quart.

Australian

Defense

Is to

Avert War

At this time when the question of the reduction of armaments is engaging the attention of statesmen in every country, the question of the defense of Australia is not without interest. The continent of Australia includes 2,934,515 square miles, of which the Northern Territory alone represents over 500,000. No student can fail to trace through history the policy which has proved so successful in building up and welding together the British westminster over the many colonies and dominions, but rather in the encouragement of self-support and in the realization that each dominion or dependency forms an important part of the whole.

Australia has now reached the stage in her development when she is in a position to form the nucleus of what will eventually be an army and navy sufficient for the defense of her coasts. Whilst, however, adequate naval and military protection is still necessary, militarism can be overdone. It is a doubtful advantage to possess an army and fleet if the taxes levied for the construction and maintenance of them cripple the country; and is not more than one country today raising the cry that the high cost of living of which the people complain is due to the excessive construction of battle-ships?

Orderliness and precision are qualities of the utmost value. In Australia the training of the men is so arranged as to cause a minimum of inconvenience to all concerned, and is carried out along the most practical lines possible. There can be little question that the discipline of military instruction will be to the advantage of the men in particular and of the country in general. Australia is wisely making haste slowly, and although alive to the importance of the protection of the country, she is not overlooking the equally important phase of her development, the opening up of the vast tracts of virgin soil with a view to attracting emigrants of the better class and so populating the country. The policy inaugurated by Australia is wise, we believe. There seems to be no doubt that the object of her statesmen will be attained, and that by adequate preparation they will be prepared not to seek war, but to avert it from her coasts.

South America and the Panama
Exposition

A NEW and pleasant chord in international relations is struck by the report brought back from a group of the South American republics by United States Commissioners Martinez and Lively, appointed to supplement President Wilson's invitation to the nations to participate in the Panama-Pacific exposition. The mission appears to have been successful to an extraordinary degree. Not only were Argentina, Brazil, Venezuela, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Uruguay found to be sympathetically disposed toward the great enterprise named, but what is of far more importance, they appeared to entertain the kindliest sentiments toward the United States. The commissioners recognize the fact that in so reporting the attitude of the countries visited they are going counter to an impression that has prevailed widely in their own land during the last year or two.

Tangible proof of this reported good feeling is to be found in the readiness with which the republics of the south have accepted President Wilson's invitation and in the generous appropriations they have made to cover the cost of their respective exhibits. These run from $100,000 by Uruguay to $1,300,000 by Argentina. Those inclined to regard participation in the exposition only as a perfunctory act of courtesy on the part of the invited nation, and therefore indicative in no sense of either official or popular sentiment, will be better satisfied when they learn that the executives of the various nations visited, who were found to be "frank, outspoken and of great ability," employed "the friendliest terms" when referring to the United States. The rapidity and ease with which the appropriations were obtained should, at least, be accepted as proof of the absence of popular opposition.

Much as the people of the United States are interested in the success of the San Francisco fair, since their government is irrevocably committed to it, and since national pride is involved in it, they will esteem the regard and respect of their southern neighbors even more highly than any aid which these neighbors may have felt it incumbent upon them, through a sense of international courtesy, to give that undertaking. International expositions come and go, enchain attention for a while and are then forgotten, but good feeling, good fellowship, true friendship among nations, are conditions which make for the permanent welfare of humanity and are to be rated, therefore, above anything that money represents or money can buy.

Sincle taxers have opened a library and reading room in Los Angeles, and they will probably score a triumph every time they succeed in inducing a man who confounds the single tax with a tax on the single to come in and read.

THE story that boys in Minnesota are being taught how to sow seems to be fully corroborated by the Minnesota crop statistics.

There is a quarter of Newark, N. J., in which are several schoolhouses and other buildings, semi-public in character, that are in use only a part of the time. In this same quarter of Newark, it seems, there are several hundred boys and girls who are usefully occupied or employed only part of the time. Of these a large number are said to be in need of contact with good moral influences. A group of thinking men and women have

Community
Work
for Boys

taken cognizance of these facts. It was thought at first that a means to the end sought would be the erection of a great building in which the young people of the quarter might be trained, entertained and directed. Then it seemed the better plan to seek and obtain, if possible, the use of the semi-public buildings during the hours when they were not otherwise occupied. And then, it appears, it was decided to place the whole matter under the auspices of the community workers of the Young Men's Christian Association, which aims to supplement the work of the home, church, school and municipality.

There are details of interest in the Newark News, but these are all secondary in importance to the point mainly dwelt upon by that journal, which is that practically all of the facilities for such work, as well as the raw material, may be found in every congested city neighborhood. This has been the experience of a number of large cities. It is not necessary to wait for building funds or public appropriations. What is most necessary is that use be made, and to the fullest possible extent, of the accommodations at hand. So far in this project, the experience of Newark-or of the quarter of Newark under consideration—seems to be the experience of every community and of every neighborhood that has bent its thoughts and energies to service. From the first step the way has opened up and become broader. It is shown in Newark, as it has been shown in Chicago, San Francisco, St. Louis, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Boston, New York and dozens of smaller cities, that in the matter of providing training, entertainment and direction for the drifting youth of neighborhood or quarter, the very first essential, and the one that leads inevitably to ultimate success, is the resolution on the part of those enlisted in the movement to recognize no obstacles.

IN THE Atlantic states, it is ascertained, there are as yet but four motor boats to each 1000 of population, and yet many were disappointed last summer because they were not invited to cruise along the coast.

Tendencies of the time point to closer affiliations of negroes with negroes in the United States. Imitation of the whites and servility to them decrease. Pride in non-Caucasian ancestry and in purity of African stock increases. In large communities where whites and blacks reside, each in considerable numbers, the negroes among themselves take on those social gradations or groupings and coterie affiliations which the whites long have had. In short, as among the whites so among the blacks, possession of worldly goods, a diploma from a college, and exemption from the necessity of manual toil count. A process of stratification is under way. As individuals gain wealth, as they become capitalists or employers of labor, and as they win power of a pecuniary sort, they create precisely the same ethical problems within race lines that the white man has been trying to solve for generations.

Professor Dubois, lecturing recently in Boston on "The Negro and the Labor Problem," has candidly set forth these phases of the situation. As a radical negro he has been wont to emphasize the injustice done his race by whites, assigning it to race prejudice; whereas, instead, it often has had its origin in the same personal egoism and covetousness that, according to Professor Dubois, are now leading the well-to-do negro to exploit his fellow black who still is in poverty.

This negro leader's side light on a race situation, which is not discussed in ordinary organs of public opinion, is illuminating. It forces one back to consideration of fundamentals of human nature and of right living. Something more than alteration of social status or pecuniary resources is seen to be necessary to induce justice and brotherhood.

Controversy over two plans for the Massachusetts building at the Panama exposition in San Francisco, begun in the commission and carried up to the executive council, does the service of calling attention to the fact that the state is to be worthily in evidence there. The plans are so little unlike that the lay citizen could not tell them apart, and so long as each presents the Bulfinch front in faithful replica the issue that is contested behind the original classic front need not give concern. Enough that the pillared triumph in design that has for more than a century looked out to the Atlantic from the height of Beacon hill, is to face about and catch the glow of the setting sun through the Golden Gate.

Massachusetts made early and fairly liberal response to the invitation to share in the exposition. It was not simply courteous, but likewise prudent. The value of world fairs comes often into question and the notion is prevalent that the sort of enterprise which began with the Crystal Palace and has run through a succession of great shows is approaching its conclusion. Yet the show at San Francisco seems to be a fitting observation of the connecting of two oceans. It gives the opportunity for both a sentimental and a practical visit of the extreme East to the farthest West. The market-seeking interests of Massachusetts have good cause to hold up the hands of the state in its patronage of the fair. Massachusetts could not, justly to itself, do less than it has done, and it ought to do all that it may to complete the effect of its participation. The Bulfinch front stands for so much at home that its reproduction should not stand for little when far away.

That idea of bringing town and country people together which has taken root in Salina, Kan., is well worthy of imitation. It is only another way of reaching the desired end of bringing the consumers nearer the producers.
